Quick briefing

Apply the lesson’s information-protection principles to controlled sharing of sensitive military information with authorized partners.

Know the facts

GSOMIA · A General Security of Military Information Agreement sets protections for military information exchanged between partners. Specific terms depend on the applicable agreement.

Classification and handling · Sensitivity and the effect of unauthorized disclosure inform classification. Markings and applicable rules govern storage, transmission and disposal.

Clearance and need to know · Access to classified information requires appropriate clearance and a legitimate need for the particular information.

Controlled sharing · Verify authorization for the specific release and use an approved recipient, channel and documented process.

Accountability and review · Records of access and exchange support review. Role-based permissions, training and audits help sustain appropriate handling.

Suspected compromise · Report credible suspicion promptly through required channels and document the material affected and actions taken.

Understand the reasoning

Partner status and an individual’s clearance answer different questions from whether that person needs a particular file or whether release has been authorized.

An approved channel protects a transmission. Recipient and release checks address whether the transfer should occur in the first place.

Philippine Army classroom exercise

A partner liaison in a fictional Philippine Army course requests the complete instructor packet shortly before a rehearsal. A separately approved handout covers the rehearsal, but the packet’s release status is unclear.

Decision · What can the coordinator do now while resolving the packet request?

Worked analysis · Confirm that the approved handout covers this audience and use the authorized channel to share it. Refer the packet request to the designated authority with the liaison’s role and stated need. This supports the rehearsal while the coordinator verifies whether the additional material may be released.

How to practice

1 · Identify the exact item requested and confirm its markings and handling instructions.

2 · Verify the recipient’s role, need to know and authorization for the requested release under the applicable guidance.

3 · Confirm the approved channel and exact recipient before transmitting the authorized material.

4 · Record the exchange using the required process and route any suspected compromise promptly through designated channels.

Check yourself

What two access conditions apply to classified information in the lesson? · Appropriate clearance and a legitimate need to know.

When should a credible suspected compromise be reported? · Promptly through the required reporting channels.
